Geography

The Caxantha region lies above the Arctic Circle, characterized by a harsh climate except for the relatively milder southern coastal areas. The continent is home to two nations: Mathlum-San and Amce-Thuti.

Climate

The climate of the Caxantha region, which is divided between Mathlum-San (settled by the Luri's group) and Amce-Thuti (founded by refugees from the Navo Federation), can be classified into three distinct zones:

Taiga and Tundra Plains

- This expansive area features vast stretches of taiga and tundra.
- The coastal regions are relatively warmer, with significant snowfall and rainfall. Winter temperatures average around -20°C, while summers reach approximately 10°C.
- The indigenous people, known as the "Jopika," live in small felt tents and call their territory "Chobartam" (named by the Luri's group).
- The Jopika practice a nomadic lifestyle, herding reindeer and horses, with each family typically tending several dozen animals. They also use open-skin boats for trade and transportation with the Okami Islands and the Jasha Republic mainland.

Inland Region

- The inland areas are significantly colder, with winter temperatures ranging between -40°C and -50°C. Even in summer, temperatures rarely rise above 0°C.

Mountainous Region

- The Manias Magurasas mountain range separates the North Pole from Caxantha.
- These mountains are rich in valuable resources such as gold, silver, copper, iron, and various unknown metals. Non-metallic materials, including coal, sulfur, halite, and flint, are also abundant.
- The wealth of these resources has attracted immigrants from the Assatta Peninsula and the Okami Islands to settle in the Caxantha continent.

Cities and Locations

Despite the nomadic lifestyle of many inhabitants, several notable cities exist in the Caxantha region:

Ujuldara

- Ujuldara is a city built on ancient stone ruins, now a major port town in the southern region.
- Once the final capital of an ancient kingdom, it retains numerous administrative structures, which have been repurposed due to their excellent condition.
- Foreign merchants maintain the port, making Ujuldara a hub of trade with Mathlum-San. Although less orderly than Kummuria, the city is relatively well-structured.
- The city is home to approximately 200,000 residents, including humans (primarily Asattian and Nording), dhampirs, and a small population of vampires. Ujuldara is a key trading center for Kummuria.

Kummuria

- Located in the northern region, Kummuria is an ancient urban ruin and the capital of Mathlum-San, ruled by the Luri's group.
- Known as the "Great White City," it is adorned with countless spires made of marble and granite.
- South of Kummuria lie marshy taigas inhabited by dhampirs nomads and gatherers.

Mutulan

- Near the Manias Magurasas mountain range, Mutulan is a cluster of small settlements inhabited by nereids, merpeople, and Dyrian communities.

Karnguth

- Established by vampire refugees from the Navo Federation, Karnguth is located along the eastern coastal area.
- Built on the site of an ancient urban ruin, the city is often referred to as the "jewel of the north."

- The city features shell-shaped domed buildings, the golden Temple of the Seven Gods, and griffon-carved wharves. Both vampires and human refugees have repurposed the ruins for modern use.

History

The history of the Caxantha region is divided into three main periods: the Ancient Kingdom, the Icy Era, and the Rediscovery.

Ancient Kingdom (200 AR - 700 AR)

To be added.

Icy Era / Dark Age (700 AR - 1400 AR)

Following the collapse of the Xeryom Regnom due to the White Frost, the region entered a period of decline. During this time:

- Culture and technology were largely lost, with much of the population migrating to ancient Bia Thin and present-day Ilan Qurun. However, these migrants were eventually assimilated due to their minority status.
- Only remnants of the Xeryom language survived, mixing with the tongues of the Nure (True) Higher Vampires and the dokkaebi to form a unique hybrid language.
- Nomadism and the use of the wheel were preserved by the kilanti people.

- Between 700 AR and 1000 AR, the region was largely uninhabited until the Jopika people arrived from Meceh Sper around 1000 AR.

Rediscovery (1450 AR)

The rediscovery of the Caxantha region marked the establishment of the modern nations of Mathlum-San and Amce-Thuti. For more details, refer to the histories of these nations.

Disaster and Its Influence

The Caxantha region has long been known as the "Region of Disaster." Its extreme and unforgiving climate includes:

- Constant blizzards, with temperatures below -20°C and heavy snowfall for most of the year.
- Exceptionally high wind speeds, often reaching several dozen meters per second.
- A brief respite during the short summer season.

These harsh conditions have shaped the region's inhabitants and their societal structures:

- The challenges of survival encouraged the development of active and intelligent personalities.
- Communities evolved into highly flexible, collective groups capable of adapting to the environment.
- Natural selection favored individuals with intelligence and calmness, fostering the growth of autonomous thinking.
